Ever since the fall of the Calomarde tyranny, the faithful have had a little relaxation in the austerity of their outward religious observances. Before that event, everybody, young and old, were most edifying in their punctuality. There is nothing exaggerated in the text respecting the fatal effects of an irreli qious note. One instance out of many shall be given. A young nobleman of high connexions had embraced the military career, in which he made rapid progress, aided by his social position. When least expecting it, however, he was suddenly placed on half-pay, and ordered to leave Madrid. Conscious of no crime or offence meriting such treatment, and wholly at a loss to account for it, he made the strongest remonstrances against the injustice of the proceeding. He was answered by an order to rerroger sus despachos, . tantamount to a deprivation of his military commissions. Several years had passed away, and he had lost almost all hope of redress, or of being able to discover the real cause of his misfortunes, when a friend of his, paying a visit one day to the old Inquisitor-general, and the aged prelate having left his visitor alone in the room fora moment, the attention of the latter was drawn to the papers lying on the table, among which, a long list of names particularly caught his eye. He took it up and read it, and, to his surprise, found the name...
